way to the locker room prior to an afternoon game.

That's when Joe Butler and his son, Jack, of South Pasadena, managed to stop Angels' manager Mike Scioscia for a little chat. It so happens that Joe's wife, Mimi, and her family are from Springfield, Pennsylvania, the same town where Scioscia grew up. All three of Mimi's brothers were tutored under former Springfield High baseball manager Ace Bell, just like Scioscia.

When hearing about his old coach and high school, the Angels' manager momentarily stopped signing autographs and shared a moment in time that Butler won't ever forget.

Of course, Scioscia obliged when Butler asked for the Angels' skipper to sign a ball and jump into a photo with him and his son. Butler also reminded Scioscia that Dukes, an old tavern in Springfield, is filled with pictures of the Angels' manager on every wall.

"Having that opportunity to meet Mike Scioscia really made the trip for me," said Butler, after the friendly exchange.
